Unknown virus emerges in Russia - Fever, Bloody Cough for Weeks

HAL TURNER | WORLD | MARCH 30, 2025 | HITS: 18609

An unknown virus has suddenly emerged in Russia. People are suffering from high fever and a bloody cough for weeks.

According to reports, the symptoms of those infected are identical: it begins with typical aches and weakness, but after a few days, the virus drains the person, making it difficult to even get out of bed, and their condition rapidly worsens.

Along with a fever up to 102.2°F (39°C), the sick report a severe cough that brings them to tears, and blood when they cough up.

Tests for COVID-19 and flu come back negative, and according to patients, antibiotics do not help.

Hal Turner Analysis

Winter/Spring viruses are nothing new, but THIS virus seems new. When was the last time any of us heard of a virus causing "bloody cough that lasts for weeks?" last time that I heard of a "bloody cough" was when there was an Ebola outbreak in Africa. A bloody ot common - at all.

That's a worry because at this particular time in world events, what is PROBABLY running through minds inside Russia is whether or not this is some type of bio-weapon attack from one of those Biolabs set up in Ukraine by the United States?

It's a fair question.

The Russians have not said WHEN this virus began, or WHERE, but we know from today's information that people "develop a bloody cough FOR WEEKS." So we know this must be going on inside Russia "for weeks."

How many weeks? How many people infected? Have any died? If so, how many? No answers.

I suspect it will not take long for the Russians to isolate and analyze this new virus. The Russians are smart people and they HAVE the labs necessary to isolate and analyze this thing.

If this thing has hallmarks of genetic engineering, and Russia declares this to be a Bio-Weapons attack by . . . the West . . . . , then all our fates are sealed.

Normally, in years past, this type of thought wouldn't even occur to me. NOW . . . . after we saw the deliberate engineering of a Bat coronavirus which became COVID-19, escape or be intentioanlly released, I realize nowadays, anything is possible.

We have some very mentally sick people in the collective West who are completely capable of deliberately unleashing something like this upon the world.

Given the particularly vicious approach to Russia by EUROPE, I personally believe it is completely possible that some mental sicko from there would do something like this deliberately; possibly thinking they can't get caught.

But they (personally) don't have to get caught. If there is evidence of CRISPR genetic editing, then "the West" would be caught . . . . and the West would, I believe, find itself in Russian cross-hairs. ACTUAL Cross-hairs.

We should pay attention to where this goes.
